

Teens and Screens: Tips for Balance

Without adult guidance, most teenagers would spend almost all of their waking hours staring at a screen. Whether they're texting on their smartphones, or they're watching videos on their laptops, their electronics use can easily get out of control. If your child says "everyone is doing it," it may be correct, but that doesn't mean there aren't serious consequences. Don't let screen time take over. Here are some tips you can use to limit your teen's screen time and how it can benefit your whole family.

1. Set rules about screen use

Rules might cover:

Where your teen can use screens – for example, only in family rooms, not in the bedroom at night, not in the car, mealtimes are free of TV, or no screen time until chores and homework are finished.

2. Role model healthy habits

Be a good role model by limiting your own screen time. Let your teen see you make the choice between looking something up on Google or checking the score of a game. Show your teen how you have learned to treat media as a privilege.

3. Educate your teen about media

Have frequent conversations about various aspects of media. Discuss how advertisements often try to convince young people that certain products will make them more attractive or more popular. Discuss the dangers of too much violence exposure and help them learn how to be an informed viewer.

4. Encourage Physical Activity

Encourage your teen to get some exercise. Going for a walk, playing a game of catch, or even doing some yard work can ensure your teen will get the physical activity they need. Think of activities you can enjoy as a family so it seems less like exercising.

PROTECT YOUR LOVED ONES AND COMMUNITY FROM THE HIDDEN DANGERS OF LEFTOVER MEDICATION

DID YOU KNOW: Over 600 million prescriptions go unused each year? These leftover pills lead to addictions, deaths and pollution if not properly discarded.

Nearly 60,000 kids under age 5 go to ERs annually due to poisoning by unsecured medications.

Dozens of medications have been detected in our drinking water.

70% of people with opioid abuse disorders have taken other people's drugs.

Over 130+ people die each day from opioid (narcotic) overdoses.

BUT THERE IS A WAY YOU CAN HELP...

DisposeRx was designed specifically to help solve the problem of left-over medications and mitigate associated risks by allowing you to dispose of your unused medication in the convenience of your home.

When the water and DisposeRx powder are added to your prescription vial and shaken, a gel is formed, making the medication unusable and allowing for the safe disposal in the household trash. See the reverse side for directions.
